Son of Annie LODGE and John ADAMSON. His father and sons CL and JA Adamson all played Minor County cricket for Durham. His brother-in-law to Lewis Vaughan Lodge, who played international football for England

He played Minor Country cricket in England for Durham from 1894 to 1914. He was also a rugby player representing Durham and England and touring Australia in 1899. After the tour he stayed in Brisbane and played grade cricket for Fortitude Valley. He gained a place in the Queensland team as a replacement, appearing in the match against New South Wales at Brisbane in November 1899.

He enlisted in the 4th Queensland Mounted volunteers for service in the Boer War and on completion of that service returned to England. At the outbreak of World War 1 he again enlisted. Six weeks before the armistice of 1918 whilst on active duty with the Royal Scots Fusiliers he was killed and is buried at Karasouli Cemetery.

He was educated at Durham School and entered into business with his father as a Stock and Share broker. Adamson set up in business, and ran a hotel in partnership with William Henry Wood and John Adamson, but the business was dissolved on 18 October 1917
